Anybody using multisites on production site ??

Posted by Loki - 2009/07/25 14:38

Since I am struggling for days to make this component work (permission issues among other things), I am willing to know if there is anybody using that component for real on a trafficked-website (5000 visitors daily at least)... Edwin told me there are hundreds ... so raise your hands !

==========

Re:Anybody using multisites on production site ??

Posted by edwin2win - 2009/07/25 14:57

---

www.jms2win.com is itself a slave site into production.
You can also have a look in the testimonial JMS 1.1.x where you will find some customer that have posted some testimonail

Here for example some post where they provide their websites
http://www.jms2win.com/forum?func=view&id=115&catid=19

Here it is another one that say it maintain more than 50 websites with JMS
http://www.jms2win.com/forum?func=view&id=178&catid=19

Here it is also a document provided by one our customers and in which he has published some information and contact http://www.jms2win.com/media/joomla_multisites/config_cpanel.pdf

You can also have a look in the review pubished by Joomla .org http://extensions.joomla.org/extensions/core-enhancements/multiple-sites/5550/details#action

Personnally, I can not provide you the URL of all the websites where the customers have installed JMS because I respect their privacy.

All you could expect is that some of our customers would be kind to reply to you.

==========

Re:Anybody using multisites on production site ??

Posted by Loki - 2009/07/25 16:19

Seems to me that the guy wrote " he intends to build 50 sites" ...

On the WWW, 1% of the websites get 90% of the traffic, 50% get let than 5 visits per day. Popular Joomla components showcase sites that are using their stuff.

Do you have any customers that has REAL traffic ?, real URL, not some obscure unverified post ...

Thanks,

LK

==========

Re:Anybody using multisites on production site ??

Posted by edwin2win - 2009/07/25 17:18

YES I have plenty of customer that are using JMS in production but I repeeat that I can not publish this information if the customer does not provide me the authorisation.

If you don't trust the review in Joomla.org or the testimonial of my customer and that you don't trust my customers that post messages in the forum that thanks me to have help them find solutions to their problem then this is your right.

Sorry if I don't publish the list of all my customers but this is confidential and I respect their privacy.

Cocnerning your permisson issue, there are plenty answer in the forum that explain that.
If you don't know how to solve it, contact the admniistrator of your servers that probablly can help you for that.
I had already replied to you that in most of cases, the Joomla FTP Layer may solve this kind of problem.
See tutorial step 15.

==========

Re:Anybody using multisites on production site ??

Posted by xtremex - 2009/07/25 17:59

Hi Loki,

I have been successfully using Edwins component Since december 2008 with over 20 domains (a couple large sites 5K+ Daily).

As this component is simply giving joomla a different configuration.php file and using symlinks to spoof the working directory there is no additional overhead to using this multisites component or by hosting or a bunch of singular sites on the same server. As there is no additional overhead traffic is arbitarilly based on Joomla, not Multisites.

I hope you pull through the frustration, which sounds like may be host related
This compontent is beneficial in the end.

Cheers
Phill

==========

Re:Anybody using multisites on production site ??

Posted by zizani - 2009/07/26 01:17

I've been using JMS since last October 2008. My single copy of Joomla 1.9 is now serving multiple websites smooth. Performancewise, I am not worrying too much for using JMS since the engine is still Joomla and JMS is just a switch. I am more concerned with maintenance, and I am happy to have only one copy of Joomla to upgrade.

Cheers,

==========

Re:Anybody using multisites on production site ??

Posted by huitzit2000 - 2009/08/14 00:34

My sites don't have that 5K visitors per day. But I can say that JMS behaves very well with 5 web sites: 8 GB RAM, 8 Cores XEON. The memory ussage never rises more than 20%. I think that you may requiere a more powerful and capable server if you will host many JMS sites being browsed by hundreds of users each, at the same time.

Kind regards,

==========

Re:Anybody using multisites on production site ??

Posted by wtfbrb - 2009/08/25 03:12

I have installed on a couple production sites now, can't do it for any of my picky clients because of extension compatibility but I did it for myself and friends websites:
www.mvmdata.com
www.campustown.net
www.mastermindvodka.com
www.mrgjuggler.com

==========