Newbie questions and issues.

Posted by miturbe - 2010/08/06 00:32

_____

Hello,
I am new to this tool and have several problems/observations:

On the description of this forum it states "(if you are a client) you have a specific forum available when you are logged-in".
However I could not find such client-specific forum.
- Could you please indicate how to get to this client forum?

When I check for parches it states:
Joomla Multi Sites version: 1.2.34 (Latest available: 1.2.35) Get Latest Version
But when I click on Get Latest Version it only shows what I already downloaded: com_multisites_V1.2.34.zip. How do I get 1.2.35?

As for the product in itself.
In the FAQ it states:
"YES, with JMS 1.2.x, it is now possible to share the users between several website."
Is this true even when the slave site is in a seperate database?

The master site already has the jos_ table prefix and we need all sites to share login/session.

Thanks for your help.

==========

Re: Newbie questions and issues.

Posted by edwin2win - 2010/08/07 11:02

_____

The forum is public to everybody.
We do not have create a specific forum for the customers.

Concerning the procedure to get the latest versino.
You have to click on the check box to get the new version download ID or you will recieve your current version download ID.
See the FAQ where a video explain how to get the latest.
We perhaps will add message to be more explicit in this webpage.
http://www.jms2win.com/faq#sec-122

Yes you can also share the user when they are located into different DB.
This just need a MySQL user that has the permission to access both DBs.

Concerning the Single Sign-In, I remember you something that is documented in the product detail, this works on the same domain. That mean that you can have slave site in subdomains or subdirectories.
When you have different domain, you can share the users but the session will be different and therefore the users will have to relogin with the same login and password.

==========