Google Analytics
Posted by delfinovc - 2011/02/13 13:35

I already have an installation with multi sites and want to add Google Analytics.

What are the procedures to change the existing IDs?

==========

Re: Google Analytics
Posted by edwin2win - 2011/02/14 19:57

Perhaps you could have a look in our free Google Analytics module that also allow you managing several domain name with specific google IDs.

See the "free download" menu.
http://www.jms2win.com/en/component/docman/doc_details/4-multi-sites-google-analytics

==========

Re:Google Analytics
Posted by joomleb - 2011/04/19 18:25

Well,
I'm beginning to love JMS and logically Multi Sites Google Analytics

What I don't understand is Why do it as Module instead as Plugin ?
Isn't Plugin a better alternative to the "module based" solution ?

==========

Re:Google Analytics
Posted by edwin2win - 2011/04/21 12:06

Yes it could be a plugin but I have prefered a module to be able choose the position where to include the code.
The old Google Analytics code was prefered in the bottom of the page (or the debug position).
Now the new google code is prefered in the top of the page or header.

In addition, this give the possibility to include several Google Analytics in the same page with different codes. With a plugin, you can enter the code only once.

So you see that you have several advantages to have the Google Analytics defined as a module instead of a plugin.

==========

Re:Google Analytics
Posted by talentsfromindia - 2011/04/25 14:40

Google analytics gives you clear indication of every thing about your domain, you can register your domain their check for the details.hopefully it will allow.

==========

Re:Google Analytics
Posted by buddyq - 2011/07/18 16:46

Are there very specific instructions on how to setup multisites Google Analytics? The download page does not give a place to see documentation and also does say if the plugin needs to be installed on all the other sites. Do you we just declare all the multisites GA codes in the master site? There seems to be a lot of instruction missing in order to get it working.

==========

Re:Google Analytics
Posted by edwin2win - 2011/07/19 09:08

All the documentation is present in the product detail.
There is nothing more required to just put a Google Key.

Here it is the copy of the detail description

Multi Sites Google Analytics is a free module for Joomla 1.5 and 1.6 that allows you add into your website the Google Analystics script code.

With this joomla module, you can assign different Google Analytics Tracker Identifier (UA-0000000-0) to different domain name. You can also assign a default identifier that will be used any domain name.
This Joomla Module is very suitable when you host multiple domain name to the same Joomla website.
This module is also works with Joomla Multi Sites.

Sample of configuration:

* www.domain1.com=UA-0000000-1
* www.domain2.com=UA-0000000-2
* =UA-0000000-3

==========