1) If the the Linux 500 "Internal Server Error" then check that you don't have a permission issue somewhere.

If this is a joomla error message, please provide the screenshot and full detail description of the error 500.

2) Can you give screenshot of your error 500
Is this a linux 500 Internal Server Error or something else.

In fact when you read the Joomla message, it mention that the "default_link" file is not found. (the box in the bottom).

Can you describe the settings and options that you used for the article.
You mentioned that you use a "Category Blog Layout" that does not seems correspond to the "default_link". Normally, a category blog should use "blog_link".
That let me suppose that you use "category layout".

Can you give me a screeshot to allow me checking the menu type and the parameters used.

A first invegation in the Joomla content, shows only one case where "default_link" can be used. This is in a "featured" articles. Not in the case of a "Category Blog".

So I need to verify the parameters that you setup for this menu item and the screenshot will help me verifying your settings.

Sorry there is no solution because I am not able to reproduce it.
As I am not able to reproduce it, I don't know the reason and therefore I can not fix it.
