Master site is shown instead of slave site

Posted by dustdog - 2010/06/09 09:19

---

Hi, I have a strange problem.
I defined a template site and from that I created a slave site with symbolic links.
The slavesite is located in denk-producties.nl/multisites/psy (psy being the slave dir).
The master is www.denk-producties.nl (the root site)
My root site uses the first database on the server, the slave is installed in the second database on the same server which I reserved for further slaves.
The domainnames from the slave site are filled in correctly (www.denk-producties.nl/multisites/psy, denk-producties.nl/multisites/psy, www.psychologievandiscipline.nl, psychologievandiscipline.nl).

It all works for an hour or so (I logged in to the slave, altered some articles), but after that... When I go to www.denk-producties.nl/multisites/psy (or www.psychologievandiscipline.nl) it shows the master site again (articles are back to the old state it appears, but it's the master I'm seeing).

I checked the config files and the domainnames/paths are all there. So what am I doing wrong?
Is it so that I have to 'define' the mastersite in JMS as well?

Cheers,
Guy

==========

Re:Master site is shown instead of slave site

Posted by dustdog - 2010/06/16 20:12

---

OK, didn't touch the sites for a few days, other things to do... Now the redirection appears to be working.
What is this?

==========

Re:Master site is shown instead of slave site

Posted by edwin2win - 2010/06/16 22:06

---

The redirection can not work with JMS multisites as this change the URL domain.
So if that works not, there is another reason.

==========