Adding Community Builder extension in a production

Posted by jlgarcia - 2011/05/02 13:49

Hi Edwin,

I have in production a master site with one slave sharing users with out any problem. Both websites have a lot of information loaded in different extensions like Zoo.

I have realised know that I need to use Community Builder and share it in the slave, but when I replicate the slave, I didn't enable the option to share Community Builder (as CB was not installed yet).

The question is, Can I do it know? Is there a way to share Community Builder without creating again the slave?

Thanks in advance.

Regards,
José Luis

==========

Re: Adding Community Builder extension in a production

Posted by edwin2win - 2011/05/02 22:34

If you already have shared the joomla users, you can add the community builder sharing on the existing website as this require that you already share the joomla users.

So, start to install CB on the master website and perhaps also on the website that slave physically the joomla users.
On the "children" website, you can use the JMS Tool menu to request the sharing of the CB.

So this should be ok.

==========

Re: Adding Community Builder extension in a production

Posted by jlgarcia - 2011/05/03 17:41

Ok, thank you. I will try.

Regards,
José Luis

==========