Rockettheme modules like RokStories and RokTabs...

Posted by king.lui - 2009/10/15 14:21

Hi.

Rocketthemes are coming with own modules like RokStories, RokTabs or RokBox. What do you think, are they compatible with JMS. I'll need it vor a websites with a lot of clones (into another db) they're only be different in articles and modules (and ChronoForms) ... without installing own components/modules on subsites.

And what's about Rok's Components like RokDownloads and RokQuickCarts?

Thanks a lot and best regards

King.Lui

If those extension are not yet defined in JMS
see http://www.jms2win.com/component/content/article/135

Send us those extension in attachement of an email.
See contact us. http://www.jms2win.com/contact

We will review them and try addings their defintion into a next JMS patches definition.

Hey Edwin thanks for the quick reply, i have installed roktabs n the slave site but the scroll effects are not working, (its working in the master site). This is the same even with rokstories

URL to the slave site:

Normally the JS can work if you have deployed the slave site into a specific directory AND that you have correctly configured your hosting server to use this specific directory.
It should be able to find the JS.

For example we have also provided a patch some weeks ago to to allow the rokmoduleorder extension update the correct joomla template "params" file when working in a slave site.

The method used by RT and gantry is BAD because they store plenty of things in ".INI" files and not only in params.ini files.
They have created and saved thing in several ini files (menuparams.ini, params.ini, presets.ini).

If you want to have a speicifc template for each slave site, the only solution that I see is copy/paste the template for each slave site and change the name of the template.
In this case, you will have a specific directories and this should keep the ".INI' files specific for each template.
To be able modify the appropriate '.INI' file, you will need to perform the copy in the master website templates directory and share the templates directory in the slave site.

The parameters of the template should be updated in the master to update the "params.ini" file. Only the master update the "params.ini" file.

If you want to copy the "/template" directory, you can create a JMS template (menu) and in the "files and folder" tab, use the action "copy" beside the "templates" directory.

Review potentially the other directories.

When you have save the JMS templates (ie. template id = duplic_templates_dir) the you can create a slave site that use the rule "duplic_templates_dir".
When you go in JMS manage site, select the JMS templates that you have created.

In a JMS templates, you can setup all the default values you want to avoid enter them in the manage site. This also allow you to change the default JMS behavior when it creates a slave site.

If you want that we setup your environment, we also have billable support that can be ordered at http://www.jms2win.com/download?page=shop.product_details&flypage=flypage.tpl&product_id=35&category_id=1

Hello,

Hello,

I am on the same problem with Rocketthem's Gantry Framework.

I am already usin copy in the Folder and File in the template set-up "copy a folder or file" but it don't solve the problem with the Gantry Framework.

Howeven there is another parameter "special copy" which I would like to know what that special is?

For us this is really a problem as all our templates is Rocckettheme templates and we would like to be able to use the new Rockettheme templates as well.

I am sure that there is a solution and as several developer and web designers now are using Joomla Multi Site it must be in interest of both Rockettheme and JMS that a solution is found.

The Gantry Framework is totally new to me so I can't offer any input on this but I can see the future potential of the Gantry Framework and Joomla MultiSites.

This is a problem i n the Gantry implementation and Rokethemes does not want to correct their mistake to be compatible.
They decided to play alone.
So complain to Rokethemes for the compatibility.
They use method that are not compatible with Joomla and they have decide to redevelop their own stuf.
Up to them to make that compatible

NO Grantry is NOT working with JMS and Rokethemes does NOT want fix their code.

We will NOT fixed the Rokethemes implementation to have their code fully compatible with core joomla.
They have rewritten several things to bypass Joomla processing.

Edwin,

i was referring to NON-Gantry templates as my understanding is that their earlier templates are still such and so should work with JMS?. I found a old thread where the Mynxx template was discussed. I am interested in using the Infuse template which came out just before thier first Gantry inspired template.

No problem with Mynxx and many other Rocketthemes templates.
I can just say that "grantry" frameworks does not work.
It is difficult to enumerate all the RT template that are working.
All I can tell you is the Mynxx, affinity and probably other are working correctly. I have already saw used by some customers.
