Menu bug when creating new site from Template

Posted by timothyfrancis - 2009/08/06 04:09

Hey! I have installed JMS and Article Sharing and have set up a template that replicates my site into a new domain name (i won't go too far into the nitty gritty of it)

However, in the new website, my menu items that link JMS articles (Multi Sites Article Layout) get lost and I have to re-set up the menu items. They still exist with the correct name, it's just that when I edit the menu item I have to reselect the Multi Sites Article Layout as it's type, or else I get a helper.php error on Line 112 (i think).

It is not a huge issue because I can just fix the menu items each time, however it may warrant looking into as it would also save me a lot of time :)

thanks :)

==========

Re:Menu bug when creating new site from Template

Posted by edwin2win - 2009/08/06 07:45

Can you give me the full path of the helper.php file you have because there are manuy files called helper.php

I also would like know the version number of Joomla you are using.

==========

Re:Menu bug when creating new site from Template

Posted by timothyfrancis - 2009/08/06 08:14

Sorry, I fixed the issue - the master site had incorrect menu items already because I had uninstalled / reinstalled JMS, and that had carried across. Silly me :P

==========

Re:Menu bug when creating new site from Template

Posted by edwin2win - 2009/08/06 09:09

I glad to see that you have found the solution

==========