Will this do it... ?

Posted by CJ - 2013/05/08 20:24

From what I've read so far, it looks like this may be just the module that I need. However, before spending the money, I do have a couple of questions. Hopefully, you can help to answer these.

My scenario: I currently host multiple social websites, hosted on a dedicated server. I am using Joomla, JomSocial and PayPlans. My goal is to enable a member joining one website to have the option, at a different level of membership, to have use of multiple web sites, by registering once, on any one of the sites. Depending on their level of membership for example.. an (A) level member could access any of the sites, with full access to the site. A (B) level member could access only the site they registered on, with full access to that site, a (C) level member would access only limited portions of the site they register on.

So, my questions are:

#1 Using this module, is this scenario possible and practical to implement?

#2 Am I correct that a different template and different content can be used on each of the sites?

#3 Can the module, and PayPlans be configured so that someone logging in on one site sees one set of membership options, while someone logging in on another site sees another set of options? (For example, the member on the .com site would see menu options in dollars, while the member logging into the .uk site would see the options in pounds)

#4 I have seen that some users have had difficulty installing and configuring this module. Do you offer a service to actually do the installation and configuration, and if so, at what cost?

Thank you in advance for your prompt response to these questions. I think most of my other questions have already been answered in the documentation and the other forums. I am very excited as to the potential of this module solving my requirements.

==========

Re: Will this do it... ?

Posted by edwin2win - 2013/05/10 18:04

---

1) If you have a method to assign a user to a specific profile and that you have setup the joomla ACL or perhaps else to manage the part of a website can be accessed by a user then create websites that is sharing the joomla users and their profile should probably do what you want.
Beside that, we have the JMS "Partial User Sharing" that allow the users have different profile depending on the website.

2) By default, the content of a website is specific to each website as the content is generally stored in the DB and that each site can have their own DB or at least have a specific table prefix.
Concerning the "/templates" directory, it can also be specific.
See the tutorial video CP-05
https://www.jms2win.com/en/tutorial#jms12x-CP-05

3) Concerning PayPlan, its content can not be shared.
So if this is the extension that restrict the access on some page in Joomla, probably that it will do what you want.
All that I can tell you is that we have defined PayPlan in the list of extension present in the JMS tool menu.
https://www.jms2win.com/en/list-of-extensions?view=extlist&id=269&Itemid=53

As each website have their own content (menu, ...) this would be the same as you have standalone website for .com and another one for .uk.

4) Yes we also provide the possibility to install JMS on your environment.
This is the reason why you can buy JMS with 1h of support for the teaching or 3 hours of support for the installation.
Our hour rate is 75 EUR/hour
All these information is present in the home page. (top right for the support).

==========