First, JMS should only be installed in the master website and not in the slave site.
The installation in a slave site is just allowed in case where you would like to propose a service to create website from the front-end of the slave site.

If you have the error reported in the "check patches" menu called from a slave site, this is absolutely normal. You can not convert a slave site into a master website.

Concerning the "mobile joomla" extension, if the patch can not be installed, perhaps this is due to a change (revamp) of the mobile joomla extension.
Please send us a copy of the "mobile joomla" extension in the attachement of an email to review it.
See our contact us menu for the email address.

Dear Friends,
JMS is installed only on Master website and is there where I get the apply patches related with mobile extension. Maybe is a more recent version I would attach it on email.
PD: Another thing I send you a question about update our version and still no answer...

Repeat the question on the "update of our version" or clarify it.
I had replied to all the question.

I have reviewed the new mobile joomla that you sent to me by email.
I confirmed that they revamp the code.

We have implemented a new patch that will be published in the patch definition 1.2.92
