DB Error Posted by bristweb - 2009/01/26 22:20
ok heres what happened
set table prefix to: {site_id}_ then created a new site with site id: n-1 this created a ton of database errors possible solutions:
correct any data that will be used as a prefix and check for duplicates in the database javascript notice if the prefix will cause error. (even if using {variable})

Can you give screenshoot and a complete reproducable scenario.
I am not able to reproduce the problem you have described.
I have created a new slave site with JSm Site manager and I have put site ID = t01, selected a template with an existing website and set the "new table prefix" = {site_id}  The result has been the replication of the website selected in the template with a new table prefix 't01_' as expected.
