This simply means that the Community Builder patch is not installed.
This can happen when you install Community Builder after you have installed JMS and its patches.
You have to re-apply the JMS patches to fix the problem.

Hi thanks for quick response,
Community Builder was installed before JMS.
You have to re-apply the JMS patches to fix the problem how do I do this?

Click on the install patch button in top right of the "Check patches" menu (the screen that tell you that a patch is missing).

If the patch does not want to be installed, check the permission relative to the Community Builder file.
Perhaps it is protected or the owner of the files does not give permission to update its content.
